

*Sandra Day O'Connor Fellow, iCivics Inc. at Georgetown Law
September 2009 – May 2010*

iCivics, Inc. is a nonprofit organization based at Georgetown Law. We are seeking a volunteer Fellow for research and writing assistance to Justice O'Connor and work on the Our Courts civics games and learning modules (www.ourcourts.org). Job responsibilities include:

- Research and writing assignments from Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, including the preparation of op-eds, academic papers and speeches related to a range of topics including civics education and judicial independence.
- Curriculum development and assistance with operations for the "Our Courts" project, including working with educators, game/web designers, foundations, and others. Our Courts is a website and series of games designed to teach and engage middle-school students in civics. The Fellow will write content for games, lesson plans, and interactive modules. Additional job responsibilities include involvement in pilot testing, distribution, grant-writing, and business planning.

Qualifications include:

- A JD degree, excellent academic record, and excellent research and writing skills
- Demonstrated ability to think strategically and creatively engage different audiences
- Experience in education, creative design, or programming preferred

This is a volunteer position. Specific job responsibilities, hours, and benefits are negotiable.

Applications consisting of a resume and cover letter should be emailed to:

Abby Taylor
Executive Director, Our Courts, iCivics Inc.

abt25@law.georgetown.edu

Applications will be considered as they are received, and no later than June 26, 2009.