LITIGATION AND LEGISLATIVE EXPERIENCE:

Member, Illinois Committee to Study the Reforming the Death Penalty (2006 – 2010).

After publishing Rape I through Rape IV in the Women's Rights Law Reporter in the late 1970's, I served as an informal advisor to legislators and feminists lobbying for legal change in a number of states considering rape reform legislation. The Center for Rape Concern Model Sex Offense statute in Rape I was used as a proposed draft for reform legislation in several states. In New Jersey it was the model for the rape reform statute adopted when the state introduced a comprehensive reform of its criminal code in 1978. By that time I was at the Office of the Public Defender and attending drafting sessions of the judiciary committees of the New Jersey Senate and Assembly in that capacity. I attended these legislative hearings over the two year period which culminated with the enactment of the Code of Criminal Justice of 1979.

After the 1979 Code of Criminal Justice went into effect, I represented a group of sex offenders incarcerated for treatment under a special sex offender sentence. These offenders had a new resentencing remedy created for them by the 1979 Code. A colleague and I collected data on the sentences of over 100 inmates then incarcerated at the Adult Diagnostic and Treatment Center in Avenel, N.J. Many were eligible for resentencing. We represented the first clients to avail themselves of the new remedy and coordinated these cases throughout the state. The litigation clarifying who was entitled to what upon resentencing under the Code resulted in a series of published opinions in which I represented plaintiffs or defendants, depending upon the nature of the legal action. As part of this litigation, and while representing public defender clients on other matters, I have appeared in the state trial courts and at every level of the state appeals courts. I have also represented public defender clients in the federal district courts, in the Third Circuit Court of Appeals and before numerous Boards and administrative tribunals. The following is a partial list of the published opinions in cases where I have been directly involved in representing public defender clients:

State v. Cavanaugh, 174 N.J. 90 (L. Div. Resen., Panel 1979)

Savad v. Dept. of Corrections, 178 N.J. Super. 386 (App. Div. 1981)

State v. Smith, 190 N.J. Super. 21 (App. Div. 1982)

Royster v. Fauver, 775 F.d. 527 (3d Cir. 1985)

Gerald v. Commissioner, N.J. Dept. of Corrections, 201 N.J. Super. 438 (App. Div. 1985) aff'd Gerald v. Commissioner, N.J. Dept. of Corrections, 102 N.J. 435 (1986)

State v. Bowen, 224 N.J. Super. 263 (App. Div. 1988)

The empirical research conducted by the Public Defender Homicide Study was presented to the New Jersey Supreme Court in two reports: "The Reimposition of Capital Punishment in New Jersey: Preliminary Report (1987)" and "The Reimposition of Capital Punishment in New Jersey: Interim Report, Vol. I and II (1988)," both cited by the New Jersey Supreme Court in its first opinion interpreting the reenacted capital punishment statute, State v. Ramseur, 106 N.J. 123. The principal findings of these reports were published in 41 Rutgers Law Review 27 (1988). A second research report analyzing a subset of felony murders in the same data set was published in 54 Albany Law Review, 709 (1990).

Partly in response to these reports the New Jersey Supreme Court issued an Order in July of 1988 appointing Professor David C. Baldus, the Joseph B. Tye Professor of Law at the University of Iowa College of Law, as a Special Master for the purpose of collecting a data base and establishing an appropriate methodology for the proportionality review of capital cases. Professor Baldus' empirical studies of the Georgia capital punishment system after Furman formed the factual and scientific basis for the statistical arguments presented to the United States Supreme Court in McCleskey v. Kemp, 481 U.S. 279 (1987).

The July 29, 1988 Order of the N.J. Supreme Court gave the Special Master the authority to collect and analyze data, produce a data base and files on individual homicide cases, invite the participation of interested parties, develop a public data file, including a record of dispositions of all relevant homicide cases, conduct hearings, procure expert technical advice, call witnesses, and request public records and any other relevant information. After removing the identifiers for some variables, the Public Defender turned over to the Proportionality Review Project its data tapes on the 703 cases analyzed in 41 Rutgers L. Rev. 27 (1988) and 54 Albany L. Rev. 709 (1990).

A detailed description of the legislative history and the effect of the reenactment of capital punishment in New Jersey, can be found in the Woodrow Wilson School Policy Conference Final Report, (L. Bienen, Director) "A Decade of Capital Punishment in New Jersey," presented to the New Jersey Assembly Judiciary Committee at the Public Hearing on ACR No. 20, March 16, 1992 and to the New Jersey Senate Judiciary Committee on March 23, 1992, at the Public Hearing on S. 549. This Report is part of the official legislative history of ACR 20 [L.1992] and S. 549 [L.1992].

For three years, the Proportionality Review Project met regularly with interested parties to discuss the legal and factual issues raised by the search for all homicide cases in the jurisdiction since reenactment and the identification of those cases which were death eligible under the New Jersey capital statute, as that statute continued to be interpreted by the court. I participated in that Project from its beginning.

The Final Report of the New Jersey Proportionality Review Project was presented to the New Jersey Supreme Court on September 24, 1991. The Proportionality Review Project and its methodology are described in State v. Robert O. Marshall II, 613 A.d. 1059 (N.J. July 28, 1992), the first case in which the court conducted proportionality review. The legal history of proportionality review in New Jersey can be found in State v. Marshall I, 123 N.J. 1 (1991), the first death sentence to be upheld on direct appeal by the New Jersey Supreme Court. An analysis of this research and its interpretation by the New Jersey Supreme Court of New Jersey can be found in 87 Journal of Criminal Law and Criminology, 263-314.
