

Connecting to the Northwestern Wireless Network

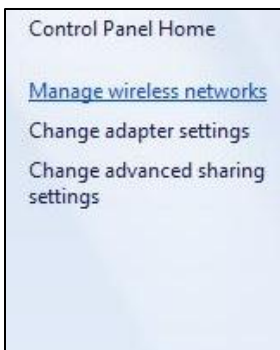

For Windows 7

Go to the Start Menu, and select Control Panel.

In the window that comes up, click on Network and Internet, and then select Network and Sharing Center.

On the left-hand side of the Network and Sharing Center window, select Manage Wireless Networks.

In the window that pops up, select Add from the bar at the top of the screen.

A screenshot of a dialog box titled 'Enter information for the wireless network you want to add'. It contains several input fields: 'Network name' with the value 'Northwestern', 'Security type' with a dropdown menu showing 'WPA2-Enterprise', and 'Encryption type' with a dropdown menu showing 'AES'. There is also a 'Security Key' field and a 'Hide characters' checkbox. At the bottom, there are two checkboxes: 'Start this connection automatically' (checked) and 'Connect even if the network is not broadcasting' (unchecked). A warning message below the second checkbox reads: 'Warning: If you select this option, your computer's privacy might be at risk.' At the bottom right, there are 'Next' and 'Cancel' buttons.

In the following window, fill out the fields as indicated in the picture, then click Next.

Then, click on Change Connection Settings.

In the window that pops up, select the Security tab at the top of the window, and make sure that the settings are the same as the picture on the left.

Then, click on Settings in the middle of the screen.

In the window that comes up, click on the Configure button at the bottom of the screen, and uncheck the box that reads “Automatically use my Windows Logon name and password (and domain if any).”

Click OK and close any open windows.

After all windows are closed, you may receive a warning from Windows asking for logon information. Click on the bubble that appears, and enter your netID and netID password into the fields.

When the second bubble pops up, you should see a window like the one to the right. Click OK.

You should now be connected to the Northwestern Wireless network.
