

EARLY DECISION CERTIFICATION

Northwestern Pritzker School of Law evaluates Early Decision applications according to the same selection criteria as regular decision applications. However, Early Decision applicants' particular interest in Northwestern Pritzker School of Law, evidenced by their Early Decision application designation, is specially considered by the Admissions Committee. Otherwise, Early Decision applicants do not have a significant advantage in the selection process. Please note that at Northwestern Pritzker, Early Decision applicants are required to complete an interview.

If admitted through the Early Decision program, Early Decision applicants commit themselves to matriculating at Northwestern Pritzker School of Law. Applicants may not apply to any other Early Decision programs during the same admissions cycle. Early Decision applicants may only apply to other law schools on a regular decision basis. Upon admission to Northwestern Pritzker through the Early Decision program, applicants must understand and agree that they are required to immediately withdraw all other law school applications and may not initiate any new applications. Failure by admitted Early Decision candidates to honor these commitments may result in the revocation of the admission offer.

Early Decision applicants may apply for financial aid. However, specific information on individual financial aid awards will not be available until after Early Decision applicants are notified of the decision on their application. Accordingly, applicants who expect financial aid to be a significant factor in determining where they will attend law school should carefully consider whether they want to apply to Northwestern Pritzker School of Law's Early Decision program, as they will not be able to compare financial aid awards from other law schools.

Applicants who are not admitted through the Early Decision program may elect to be held and evaluated again as part of the regular applicant pool.

Northwestern Pritzker reserves the right to provide peer law schools with the names of applicants accepted under our Early Decision program.
