Clean water is symbol of the power of the people

Founding fathers could not foresee today's problems

Defining the commerce power as the hub of the Constitution, an implicit understanding among the framers was that it would ensure the power of the people. The commerce power was intended to be the primary means by which the federal government could regulate interstate commerce and, thereby, ensure the economic well-being of the nation. The framers recognized that the commerce power was essential to the survival of the Republic and that it would be used to promote the common good.

The commerce power was not seen as a tool for regulating individual actions, but rather as a means to foster economic development and to ensure that the rights of the people were protected. The framers believed that the commerce power would be used to promote the common good and to ensure that the rights of the people were protected.

The commerce power was not intended to be used to regulate individual actions, but rather as a means to foster economic development and to ensure that the rights of the people were protected. The framers believed that the commerce power would be used to promote the common good and to ensure that the rights of the people were protected.

The commerce power was not seen as a tool for regulating individual actions, but rather as a means to foster economic development and to ensure that the rights of the people were protected. The framers believed that the commerce power would be used to promote the common good and to ensure that the rights of the people were protected.

The commerce power was not intended to be used to regulate individual actions, but rather as a means to foster economic development and to ensure that the rights of the people were protected. The framers believed that the commerce power would be used to promote the common good and to ensure that the rights of the people were protected.

The commerce power was not seen as a tool for regulating individual actions, but rather as a means to foster economic development and to ensure that the rights of the people were protected. The framers believed that the commerce power would be used to promote the common good and to ensure that the rights of the people were protected.

The commerce power was not intended to be used to regulate individual actions, but rather as a means to foster economic development and to ensure that the rights of the people were protected. The framers believed that the commerce power would be used to promote the common good and to ensure that the rights of the people were protected.

The commerce power was not seen as a tool for regulating individual actions, but rather as a means to foster economic development and to ensure that the rights of the people were protected. The framers believed that the commerce power would be used to promote the common good and to ensure that the rights of the people were protected.

The commerce power was not intended to be used to regulate individual actions, but rather as a means to foster economic development and to ensure that the rights of the people were protected. The framers believed that the commerce power would be used to promote the common good and to ensure that the rights of the people were protected.

The commerce power was not seen as a tool for regulating individual actions, but rather as a means to foster economic development and to ensure that the rights of the people were protected. The framers believed that the commerce power would be used to promote the common good and to ensure that the rights of the people were protected.